KIA ANNOUNCES ENTRY IN THE PARIS DAKAR CAIRO 2000

IRVINE, Calif., October 12, 1999 - Two Kia Sportage sport-utility vehicles have been entered in the Paris Dakar Cairo 2000, one of the world's most difficult motorsports events. Entered by Baja Automotive Adventures, the Sportages will be driven by the only Americans entered in the event thus far and will compete in Class T3.1.

One Sportage will be driven by two-time SCORE Class 3 desert racing champion Darren Skilton, who will be accompanied by co-driver Sue Mead, an automotive journalist from Massachusetts. The other Sportage will be driven by former SCORE Trophy Truck champion Curt LeDuc.

The rally gets underway Jan. 6, 2000, and will cross six countries and 10,000 kilometers during the 18-day race. The competing teams will do battle with some of the most difficult terrain in the world, first crossing Senegal before tackling Mali. The competitors will have to cross the Tenere, and then pass through the lonely, wind-blown reaches of southern Libya. Finally, if their machines are still in operating condition, the competitors will race across the cathedral dunes of Egypt. From oasis to oasis, the rally route will lead all the way to the foot of the pyramids in Cairo for a grand finale. Most consider simply finishing the event to be a huge victory.

"The Dakar Rally is the ultimate challenge for me as an off-road racer, and it has been a dream of mine," Skilton says. "I've driven the Sportage in desert races for three years, and I believe we have a great chance to succeed in this event." As the rally unfolds, Skilton's co-driver Sue Mead will provide reports to various radio and TV outlets covering the event. "I've competed in many vehicle endurance events," Mead said, "but this will be the highlight of my career." Kia crew members include off-road veterans Troy Johnson, Glen Plake, Larry Hawkins, James Fisher and Gavin Skilton.
